6:00 pm. Dinner at “Madison’s on Fifth” restaurant. This is on the corner of Madison and 5th, inside the PacWest building.

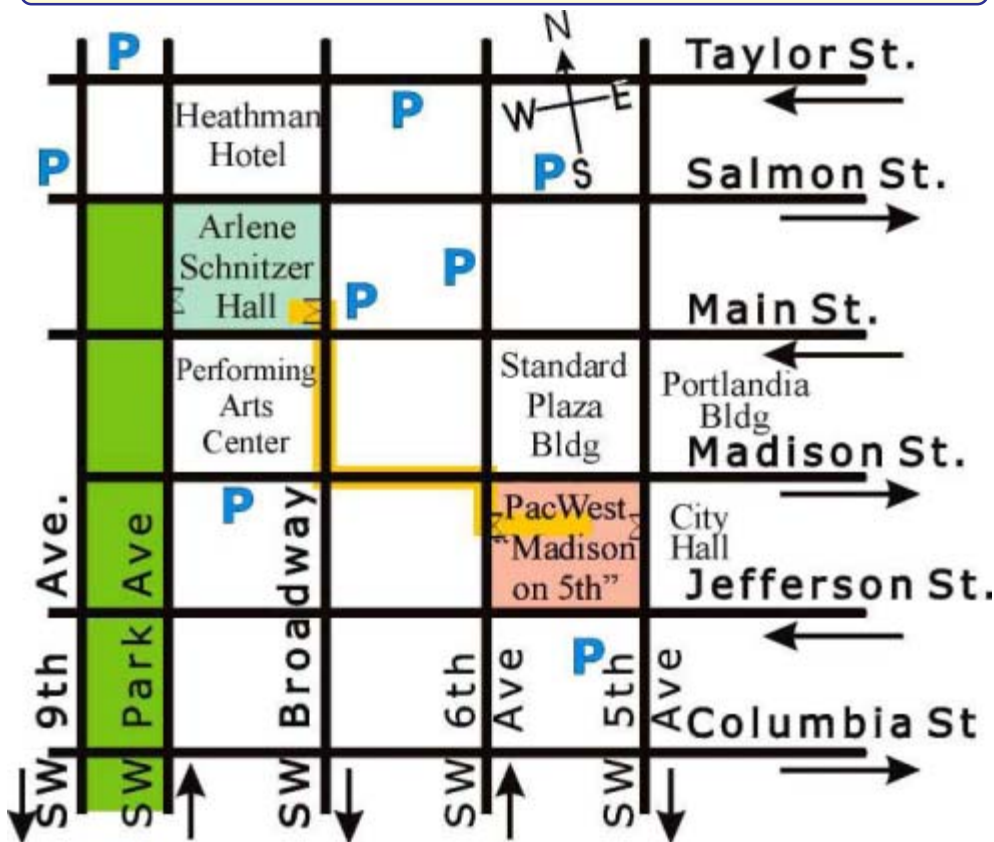

About 45 of us will be there. If you are planning to come, you must RSVP to Emilio, so we can reserve the appropriate number of tables. If you prepaid for the movie tickets, Emilio will have your ticket at the restaurant.

After dinner, we’ll walk about 2 blocks to the Arlene Schnitzer Concert Hall, to watch the latest Warren Miller movie, “Impact”, starting at 8:00 pm.

Everyone attending the movie will receive the following free lift tickets:

1. Mt. Hood Meadows, Oregon (1 ticket good for April 2005)

Plaza ski club was founded in the Standard Plaza Building (between Main & Madison) in 1975.

Edgeset ski club was founded in the 1st National Bank (later 1st Interstate, now Wells Fargo), in the block just south of the PacWest building, around 1970. These two clubs merged in the Fall of 2000, and renamed Mt. High in the Fall of 2003.

Winter Forecast

Good news!

The Oregon Climate Service at OSU has issued an early weather forecast for this winter, and it sounds great:

See www.ocs.oregonstate.edu

Our Web Site

Please check our web site, www.mthigh.org, frequently for the latest info on trips, upcoming events, PACRAT racing, and latest photos.

It gets updated often. For example, about a week after our Seafood Social and the Mt. Hood Heritage Day, photos of both events were posted on the web site. They are still there, under “Recent Photos”.

Also, the Events page gets updated quite frequently.

During the winter, keep an eye on the Trips page, where daily outing to Mt. Hood will be posted.

All membership forms can be found on the Forms page.

OPINION

How We Differ

by Emilio Trampuz

All we do on the mountain is make left and right turns, so you might think we are all alike. But, boy do we differ! And it's a good thing, because variety is the spice of life!

We differ in the choice of equipment: alpine, nordic, telemark, monoski, ski boards, snowboard, or horse-drawn sleigh!

We differ in the choice of companionship. Some prefer to ski alone and not worry about having to wait for others, or worse: having others wait for them! And yet others seek company at all expense. We have all seen intermediate skiers get on slopes way beyond their comfort level, trying to keep up with a group of more advanced friends.

But, most of all, we differ in the choice of terrain. Just as terrain can be infinitely varied, there is a surprising number of different types of skiers and boarders.

There is the obvious difference between sticking around a half-pipe all day versus roaming the open slopes. Also, there are differences due to ability, such as choosing green, blue or black according to our own ability level.

But, let's look at the differences due to purely personal choice. A lot of us in the club are experienced skiers, with lots of mileage on the mountain. We can handle all kinds of terrain, but still we have our preferences.

Challenging crud vs. virgin powder. Most of us enjoy the sensation of cutting first tracks in fresh powder. But, when the powder gets cut up, our paths start diverging. Some of us continue attacking the same cut-up slope, and seek even steeper lines, while others prefer to look elsewhere for some remaining untouched snow, even if found on more mellow slopes.

Both of these groups are often referred to as "powder" skiers, but in reality, the first group is more into seeking challenge, while the second group seeks novelty, and that feeling of cutting a brand new trail, regardless of how steep or challenging it may or may not be.

Big skiing vs. tight. "Tight" sounds better than "small", the opposite of "big". You know, people often refer to making big turns, or skiing "big". Usually, that means skiing fast and making very few turns, making very wide-radius turns. Basically just zooming down the mountain as fast as you can. Maybe "big" is really "addicted to speed"?

By contrast, some of us prefer to enjoy every turn, making as many turns as possible within a given amount of vertical. These people believe the "big" group is wasting vertical.

The September issue of Skiing Magazine has an article written by some Americans skiing in Europe, who were overtaken by an athletic Spaniard while climbing up to some untracked powder. In the end, they got their revenge and satisfaction by noting that they only made 5 or 6 turns on the way down, while the Spaniard made like 30, 40 or 50 turns.

Hmm, ... I don't know. It seems to me that the Spaniard may have had more fun, but that may be because I belong to the group that subscribes to the notion that small is beautiful and that every turn should be savored, rather than skiing it in a blur. But, hey, that's just my own bias.

Sightseeing vs. Adrenalin pumping. Sightseers want to explore the whole mountain and then some. Leave no corner untouched. They like the sensation of travelling on skis and want to see where the skis will take them. Even the flats can be enjoyable, as long as the skis keep moving.

The Adrenalin seekers don't feel any need to see everything. Why waste time on green or blue slopes? The blacks and double-blacks are the really exciting places. Better stay on the slopes that give you the full rush. This group will not willingly go far and wide, but if they do, and they find themselves on a long and winding road, they will mostly hate the traverse, regardless of how fast the skis may be moving along the road.

So, celebrate your uniqueness. And see how many more different types of skiers/riders you can identify on the slopes!

Remembering the Games in Sarajevo, 1984 (by Emilio)

Who would have imagined that Debbie Armstrong - the Olympic Gold medalist in GS at the Winter Games in Sarajevo, 1984 - would be hugging me as I was named Man of the Year at the FWSA Convention in Reno, in June 2004?

I remember Debbie from 1984. I did not meet her then, but I skied in Sarajevo shortly before the Olympics. I don't have a photo of me in Sarajevo, but here's one from that period. Check out the safety straps on those skis, back in 1983!

My week in Sarajevo was memorable because I arrived at the tail end of a huge storm, and experienced real powder skiing for the first time in my life. A Canadian TV crew member was there, and took a day off to enjoy the powder. He gave me some pointers, when he saw me struggling. Told me to start by hopping up & down. Later that day, I was whooping and hollering through knee-deep snow!

The Canadian guy remarked how cheap the lift ticket was. He had paid less than a dollar! But, it wasn't really that cheap. At the counter, he had raised one finger, and they gave him a ticket valid for a single ride up! He skied all day on that ticket!

A month after the Olympic Games, I moved to the United States! Ah yes, 1984 was a good year for both Debbie Armstrong, and for me!
